

GASHI and Swanson have changed the date of their jiu jitsu-wres tling match to the 13th, Friday. When Higashi's attention was caled to the day and date he said, with true Japanese politeness, "Ah! I am so corry that it is so unfortunate a day for Swanson. In Japan Friday and the 13th are not unlucky."

From all present appearances this will be something nearer the genuine Japanese fighting goods than the Bothner-Higashi match showed. Swanson can win only by pinning Higashi down for the space of a minute, during which time the Jap is at liberty to use any of the jlu jitsu trickery, if he can. Higashi, on the other hand, must force Swanson to "quit." That is, if he can get either a strangle or a bone-breaking hold, he is simply to put on the pressure until Swanson "quits" or the referee (George Bothner) interferes to save the wrestler's life.

"If strangled or otherwise rendered unable to speak, either nan can signify his surrender by rapping on the floor with his knuckles or signalling to the referee.

'The referce shall have power to stop the bout if, in his opinion, either man is unconscious or in danger of serious injury, and unable to signal his

"All holds, either of wrestling or jiu jitsu, shall be allowed."

CCORDING to these conditions Higashi can use every artifice connected with jiu jitsu except the kicking and hitting tricks. The main dizadvantage that he will experience will lie in the fact that he will have to take his bone-racking grips and exert the pressure slowly instead of suddenly. That will give Swanson a chance to break away from ticles were signed, called Higashi's attention to the fact that Swanson his strangle hold to the best of his ability. "That's all right!" said Higashi. "I like him to try hard strangle me. If he attack me then big wrestler. At the first grapple the Jap broke three of the a pitch as it happened, was a boxer as well. He hauled off and punched the Japanese in the eye. The little Jap drew back (he couldn't speak a word of thow. Chase bounced to Dish, I English) and tried to explain politely that, as he understood the rules, McIntyre. TWO RUNS. wrestier punched him again, on the tip of his unprotected nose. Then the little Jap went to work. At the end of an hour both were carried from the ring and taken to the nearest hospital. The Japanese, having the patience of his race, and a nice consideration for the ethics of the game, had carefully abstained from breaking the fighter's lsg. He might have done the stole whird. Griff was out, Dish to keep the stole whird. Griff was out, Dish to kindsay, Cockman crossing the plate, the asily, but he only cracked a few fingers and minor joints. Still, he cannot dispose of Dish. Molntyre was out, Laporte to Chase. NO RUNS.

Cockman doubled to the score board, the stole whird. Griff was out, Dish to Lindsay, Cockman crossing the plate. Hahn was out, Coughlia to Lindsay. ONE RUN.

Gilbert was wrestier punched him again, on the tip of his unprotected nose. Then the came out little better than his rival, for he sustained two black eyes and a flattened nose, as well as numerous marks from bony and uncovered

Higashi, I think, might have done better, for he has been here long, enough to have picked up a fair knowledge of the fine points of the boxing game. Personally, I would much prefer taking a quick knocking from Jeffries to mixing it up with Higashi down a dark alley or in a South Carolina "wrestling" bout.

CPEAKING of jiu jitsu, how about the Glants' grip on the pennant? Isn't that a bone-breaker?

NE of the funniest things that happened during a somewhat amusing filed out. Dougherty made a good catch of Drill's drive. Dish fanned out. No RUNS. dell. No matter how much some of the fellows were fooled by the "Rube's" list of fatal injuries, there was one "wise guy" who refused to That was John McGraw. When asked whether or not he though there was a tiny little chance that Waddell might possibly, after all, turn out for the final scramble for the championship pennant, wily John refused to commit himself in words. He only closed one eye thoughtfully, and nearly smiled.

FOUND HUMAN ARM IN CELLAR.

Possible Relie of Some Ancient Murder, Police Think, but Cannot Trace It.

A woman's right arm, with the bones, ligaments and muscles complete, which had evidently lain in the earth a long had evidently lain in the earth a long time, having dried and become mummled, was discovered in front of No. 513 West For.y-third street to-day.

Thomas Kristic, President of the Austro-American Citzens' Club, saw boys throwing he human relic at each other in play. One of them, John Keane, twelve years old, of No. 521 West Forty-third street, told Mr. Kristic they had found the arm in a mass of earth and rubbish which had been thrown out of the cellar of the tenement at No. 512. The cellar is being deepened and enlarged.

The cellar is being deepened and enlarged.

Mr. Kristic looked over the rubbish for other human parts, but found mone. The Keane boy took the arm to the West Forty-seventh street station. Its discovery was recorded on the biotter and it was sent to the Morgue. The police think it may be a relic of some arcient murder. The tenement is occupied wholly by colored families, who could give the police no explanation of the presence of the arm in the cellar.

eight days ago, after finishing a hard week's work at the Jefferson Market Police Court. It is reported that on reaching Atlantic City he wont to bed, and two physicians were called. The doctors said he was suffering from some form of fever. For two or three days the sick man had a high tempera-ture.

Magistrate Finn was unable to sit in the Harlem Police Court on Sunday, and Magistrates Crane and Moss ex-changed places. Mr. Crane went to the Harlem Court, Mr. Moss tak-ing Jefferson Market. There was much confusion following the adjourning of cases set for examination before Mag-istrate Finn.

BROKE LAW TO SAVE SICK CHILD.

(Special to The Evening World) NEWPORT, Oct. 3.—The illness of the young daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Peter D. Martin as the Pinard Cottages became known to-day in a peculiar manner when in she police court Mr. Martin's chauffeur pleaded guilty of overspeeding.

The child was taken ill while its mother was calling upon her mother. Mrs. Charles M. Oelrichs, in Kay street, yesterday afternoon, and the chauffeur exceeded the speed limit in taking it home. Judge Franklin only fined him sio and costs. The plea of guilty was by advise of an interproter and the official, though it is not believed a Jury would have convicted the chauffeur.

Joaquin Eiting, seventy years old, of literville, N. Y., captain of the canal out McCuilough, was found drowned oday off pier . East River.
